Objectives: At the conclusion of the seminar, attendees will be able to recognize a variety of reactive and neoplastic lesions of the thyroid gland, parathyroid gland, pancreas, and adrenal gland, formulate a differential diagnosis, and identify important histologic criteria to separate them. Select and integrate immunohisto-chemical, molecular, and/or genetic procedures that aid in diagnosis or have prognostic significance. Understand their clinical behavior and be able to communicate effectively with clinicians about their management.

Materials: 1) Glass slides and/or digital images representative of 15 - 20 hematolymphoid disorders, 2) Correlating clinical histories, 3) Six hour lecture including images of each case and other illustrative materials, 4) Comprehensive printed color syllabus, including diagnosis, discussion, and appropriate literature references.
